The 69th edition of The Winter Show is upon us.

Inside the Park Avenue Armory, The Winter Show is the leading art, antiques, and design fair in the country, featuring 68 of the world's top experts in the fine and decorative arts. It runs until January 29.

As an annual benefit for East Side House Settlement, this year, the antique jewelry is all the rage.

“A number of people have told me that the show looks particularly great this year, and there is certainly wonderful jewelry on the floor,” said James McConaughy, the partner and vice president of S. J. Shrubsole.

A few highlights from his booth includes a classic Verdura citrine and diamond necklace and earring set from 1945, a Cartier ring and earring set from 1950, and a beautifully crafted fish brooch from 1950, “which is set with a star sapphire of approximately 68ct,” said McConaughy.

He counts a Alfonse Fouquet jasper cameo bracelet at the Robinson booth as “a real sculptural work of art,” while a ruby and diamond butterfly from 1905 at the A La Vieille Russie booth is “a show stopper.”

Meanwhile, at the Simon Teakle booth, they have the Oscar Heyman Pearl Necklace on view, which was worn by New York socialite, Brooke Astor.

“Historically, New York is and always has been one of the most important centers for jewelry collectors,” said Simon Teakle. “This spectacular pearl and diamond

From Monaco, Véronique Bamps features rare pieces at her booth, “most of them are signed and very wearable,” she says.

One of her favorite pieces on view is a lacquered necklace by Art Deco artist and designer Jean Dunand from 1925, “as well as an art deco Cartier bracelet set with garnets, rock crystal and diamonds from London, circa 1930,” she says.

“I find The Winter Show to be of very high quality in every specialty this year,” adds Bamps. “In my opinion, this is the best show in America.”
